

WHY

“MOVE_MOvement Valorize Europe. New Competence for trainers” stems from the awareness that amateur sport is an increasingly important economic sector in Europe and training of operators active in this field could be strategic.

Sport professionals are crucial for issues such as psychophysical wellbeing of the people and social inclusion, and in a way play the role of “linkage” between educational, healthcare and social systems.

MOVE main objective is to design - by means of participative research and analysis - Competence Learning Units, in order to strengthen strategic and cross-cutting scopes of competence (such as relational, multicultural, empowerment and resilience, etc.) of the various professional profiles (coaches, teachers, trainers, sports managers, operators, etc.).

- Research on National Sports Promotion Policies, training systems and existing qualifications. A survey conducted through questionnaires on the training needs of sports managers and coaches;
- A survey conducted through questionnaires to people who do/do not do sports about their motivations for practicing or not practicing sports;
- Study and data analysis for the definition of the Training Model and its Methodological Guide to encourage its use in the training systems in European countries;
- Website and web platform for discussion on the main topics concerning training: grassroots sport, inclusion, aggregation, education, best practices.
